Puss in boot

Car owner Bob Jackson couldn't believe his eyes the day he opened his boot.

For inside, curled up in the corner, he found his pet cat 'Tiddles'.

Car

"He must have got in while I was washing the car on the drive, and I reversed the car into the garage not realising he was there", he told us afterwards.

Cat

Remarkably Tiddles the cat was none the worse for wear after his frightening experience.

"It's a lucky thing cats have nine lives", added a relieved Bob after forgiving his mischievous moggy.

Eighteen-year-old Wendy Thompson couldn't believe her eyes the day she won first prize in a Viz Comic pop competition. For Wendy, who comes from Fulchester, hadn't even entered.

But neither had anyone else, and so Wendy's name was picked out of several thousand listed in a telephone directory. And her prize: A night out with her pop idol, Shakin' Stevens.

"It was a dream come true", she told us after the couple had dined at a top restaurant.

"Afterwards Shaky took me dancing. It was great. An experience I shall never forget", said an excited Wendy.

"I shall be placing a regular order for Viz in the future", she added.

Biscuit cat's a ginger nut

Marmalade the cat almost got himself into a real jam the day he got lost in a biscuit factory.

PUSSY

For the ginger kitten nearly lost all of his nine lives at once when he fell into a packaging machine. The poor pussy ended up packed in a biscuit tin along with two pounds of custard creams.

KITTEN

Shopkeeper Bill Johnson heard the kitten's cries for help as he was stacking biscuits on shelves at his shop in Sheffield.

"He was in remarkably good shape considering what he's been through. He must have survived by eating biscuits".

CAT

Marmalade's owner, Mrs Betty Miles of Carlisle was delighted to get her cat back safe and sound.

"I should think he's had enough biscuits to last him all of his nine lives", quipped Mrs Miles who will be keeping a closer eye on Marmalade in future.

BIG I D E A

North East based band DUTCH have decided to think big. For as lead singer Jon explained; "You have to think big if you want to get anywhere these days."

HAD

Recent events had been going badly for the band, and morale reached an all time low in 1982 when they almost won the televised 'Battle Of The Bands' competition. "We came second", Jon recalled grimly. "But it was far too close for comfort".

Eventually Jon decided to make the 'big' decision, and his first move was to look for new management. "We went to see Foundry Entertainments in Newcastle and I liked what I saw. They had a big office, big furniture. They even wore big trousers. I could tell they were thinking big, so we signed up".

WAS

The next step for Dutch was to actually get big. "We took on a few backing singers, a couple of brass sections, a few pianists and a harp", Jon explained. "But things didn't work out. There was 26 of us all told, and it was very difficult trying to organise rehearsals".

AND

So the band reverted to a four piece line up featuring Jon, Ken Thornton, Paul Campbell and Mark Saville, with Anna Ross providing additional vocals. But as guitarist Paul is quick to point out, the band are still thinking big. "We've all bought bigger instruments", he told us. "And we've added three minutes to the length of all our songs".

HOSTAGES GO TOP!

A pop group similar to the ones in our Top Ten chart.

At last! Tyneside's time served tunesmiths THE HOSTAGES have a number one hit! They flew straight into our new TOP TEN at number one with their single 'Going Up In The World'.

TOP

But it wasn't that long ago that the band's future was looking bleak. For when the single was released on the EMI label in summer, it failed to appear in the Top Forty, as singer Ray Byrne recalled.

POPS

"We were looking forward to seeing ourselves on Top Of The Pops, but when we sat down to watch it, we weren't even in the charts".

After making enquiries the band discovered that to have a hit single several thousand copies of a record must be sold in record shops.

No.1

"That was when we decided to try the Viz Top Ten", drummer Bryan Sowerby explained. The band scraped together five pounds and sent it in, together with a copy of the record. And that five was enough to earn the likeable five piece the coveted Number 1 slot.

Sadly, EMI have since terminated the band's recording contract, but as guitarist Dave Whittaker explained, they don't care.

Cat in shell shock

Soldiers at the Royal Artillery Regiment had given up hope of finding their mascot 'Sheba' the cat after she had gone missing at their base in West Germany.

That was until observer Gunner Ken Green heard noises coming from an unexploded shell half buried in mud on the target range.

For the adventurous cat had somehow got lost in the regiment's arsenal and had found it's way into a fifty pound artillery shell.

"How she got in there I'll never know", said Sergeant Bill Brown, who looks after the cat.

"Luckily the shell did not explode on impact after it had been fired. Otherwise Sheba would have been a gonner".

Fortunately Sheba was unharmed during her fiery experience, if not a little tired.

"Hopefully she'll have learnt her lesson" said Sgt. Brown.

"She must have used eight of her nine lives at once on this occasion", he added.

WHOOPS!

KANE GANG'S H.P. CASSEROLE LEAVES GROUP IN THE SOUP

Three Sunderland lads will never forget the day they went shopping in Newcastle. For Martin Brammer, Dave Brewis and Paul Woods stumbled upon Kitchenware Records while trying to buy a set of casserole dishes.

DISHES

"We saw a sign saying 'Kitchenware' so we just walked in to have a look around. I must have been whistling or something, cos this bloke walked up and offered us a record deal", explained Dave, 27.

But as Paul explained, there had been quite a mix up at the time: "Martin thought he was buying a set of casserole dishes on h.p. so he signed the contract straight away. It was only later when we were told to record a single that we realised we had signed a record deal".

BOWLS

According to their contract the luckless trio had only 2 weeks in which to record a single.

"It was quite a shock", Dave explained. "None of us had any kind of musical background. We had to go out, buy instruments, and then after a couple of days we tried writing a song".

JUGS

The song which they wrote was 'Brother Brother' and it was released as their first single in June 1983 under the band's hurriedly chosen name The Kane Gang.

"It wasn't bad for a first attempt", admitted Paul. But their contractual obligations meant that they still had another three singles to record. By the time the second, 'Small-town Creed' had been released in April 1984, the unlikely threesome were beginning to enjoy life in the music business.

Dave, Paul and Martin. INSET- Smoked glass saucepan set with pouring lip and glazed ceramic handle and lid.

PLATES

"By the time we recorded our third single, 'Closest Thing To Heaven', we were beginning to have fun", Martin explained. "Dave was turning out to be quite a good musician, and Paul and I were doing all the singing."

BASINS

Indeed, 'Closest Thing To Heaven' was a number 12 hit for the group in the UK, and they were soon making their debut on Top Of The Pops. And they expect their fourth single to do even better!

PYREX

However the release of 'Respect Yourself' means that the groups contractual obligations have been fulfilled. Asked about their plans for the future, Dave Brewis was unsure. "I'm not sure", he told us. "We may just go back to Sunderland and try to lead normal lives again. But then again, we've enjoyed making records and we may stick at it for a while yet".

GRAVY BOAT

But Martin Brammer has no doubts about his immediate plans: "With all this money I've made at last I'll be able to buy some casserole dishes", he announced. "But this time I'll be more careful before signing anything".

UNLUCKY ADA

Ada Wilson is surely the most unlucky pop singer/songwriter in Wakefield. For despite over 20 years in the music business he is still no nearer to having a hit than he was on the day he started.

"I began in 1962 playing at The Cavern Club in Liverpool. Things were going well until I was suddenly kicked out to make room for The Beatles. At first they had asked me to join them, but I missed a bus on the way to the audition and Paul McCartney got the job instead".

SONGS

Ada spent the rest of the sixties writing new songs. "In one week I wrote 'Walk On By', 'McArthur Park', 'Yesterday' and 'California Dreaming', but I left them all on a bus. Someone must have found them and ripped them all off".

PUNK

By the turn of the decade a frustrated Ada had decided to invent 'punk rock'. "I formed a band called The Sex Guns in 1972 and we released a single called

'Anarchy in Great Britain'. Nothing happened, and eventually we disbanded in 1976, two days before the punk explosion".

RELAX

In 1983 Ada sent a demo tape of a song he'd written called 'Relax' to producer Trevor Horn.

"He didn't reply, but I knew he'd got the tape 'cos the next day Frankie Goes To Hollywood recorded the song and it was a big No.1"

SINGLE

Ada recently re-recorded 'In The Quiet Of My Room', a single he first released in 1980. The record is available in the shops on the Thin Sliced label, cat. no. TSR5. And he plans to follow it up with his own version of 'Nathan Jones', a song which he wrote himself, but which was stolen during a burglary on his flat in the sixties, and was recorded by The Supremes shortly afterwards.

ARE SPANDAU BALLET SOFT?

The 'tough

EXCLUSIVE

On their record sleeves they look butch. On their videos they look macho. But we can reveal that behind the 'tough guys' image, SPANDAU BALLET are probably the softest band in Britain; unable to drink a lot, and almost totally disinterested in women.

TOUR

We caught up with the band on their recent UK tour and we put it to lead singer Tony Hadley that he couldn't take his drink.

Predictably he refused to comment. Indeed, all our accusations were greeted by a stony silence from the band.

HOTEL

However, when we spoke to staff at the hotel where the group were staying, our suspicions were confirmed.

We were told how the band had:

- Drank shandy at the bar.
- Gone to bed at 11.00pm.
- Not taken any girls up to their rooms.
- Done no damage in the hotel.

And a chambermaid, who preferred to remain anonymous, claimed that ashtrays provided for the band had been left untouched.

RING

When we rang the group's record company in London a spokesman said it was a bad line and that he would ring us back. But he didn't.
